Spike in Fireworks Injuries

over the Last 15 Years

It's that time of year when Americans everywhere will be celebrating the Fourth of July holiday with family, friends, and fireworks. Unfortunately, over the past 15 years, there has been an increase in the number of people injured during this festive time.

A new report by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) finds a significant upward trend in fireworks-related injuries. Between 2006 and 2021, injuries with fireworks climbed 25% in the U.S., according to CPSC estimates.

Last year, at least nine people died, and an estimated 11,500 were injured in incidents involving fireworks.

"It's imperative that consumers know the risks involved in using fireworks, so injuries and tragedies can be prevented. The safest way to enjoy fireworks is to watch the professional displays," said CPSC Chair Alex Hoehn-Saric. In addition, he said, "CPSC's Office of Compliance and Field Operations continues to work closely with other federal agencies to prevent the sale of illegal consumer fireworks."

CPSC's report shows:

- Of the nine U.S. deaths, six were associated with firework misuse, one death was associated with a mortar launch malfunction, and two incidents were associated with unknown circumstances.
- There were an estimated 11,500 emergency room-treated injuries involving fireworks in 2021—down from the spike (15,600) experienced in 2020, during the first year of the COVID-19 pandemic, when many public displays were cancelled.
- An estimated 8,500 fireworks-related injuries (or 74 percent of the total estimated fireworks-related injuries in 2021) occurred during the 1-month special study period between June 18 and July 18 last year.
- Young adults 20 to 24 years of age had the highest estimated rate of emergency department-treated, fireworks-related injuries in 2021.
- In 2021, there were an estimated 1,500 emergency department-treated injuries associated with firecrackers and 1,100 involving sparklers.
- In 2021, the parts of the body most often injured by fireworks were the hands and fingers (an estimated 31 percent of injuries) along with the head, face, and ears (an estimated 21 percent).
- About 32 percent of the emergency department-treated fireworks-related injuries in 2021 were for burns.
- In 2021, approximately 31 percent of selected and tested fireworks products were found to contain non-compliant components, including fuse violations, the presence of prohibited chemicals, and pyrotechnic materials overload.
 - CPSC urges consumers to celebrate safely this holiday by following these safety tips:

Tips to Celebrate Safely

- Never allow young children to play with or ignite fireworks, including sparklers.
 Sparklers burn at temperatures of about 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit—hot enough to melt some metals.
- Keep a bucket of water or a garden hose handy, in case of fire or other mishap.
- Light fireworks one at a time, then move quickly away from the fireworks device.
- Never try to relight or handle malfunctioning fireworks. Soak them with water and throw them away.
- Never place any part of your body directly over a fireworks device when lighting the fuse. Move to a safe distance immediately after lighting fireworks.

- Never point or throw fireworks (including sparklers) at anyone.
- After fireworks complete their burning, to prevent a trash fire, douse the spent device with plenty of water from a bucket or hose before discarding the device.
- Make sure fireworks are legal in your area, and only purchase and set off fireworks that are labeled for consumer (not professional) use.
- Never use fireworks while impaired by alcohol or drugs.

Fun 4th of July Activities for Kids

Few things say summer more than the Fourth of July. And while the holiday is generally celebrated across the U.S., each family has their own unique Fourth of July traditions. Of course, when kids are involved, families may need to put a few twists on their regular go-to's in order to make the day fun — and engaging — for all. (Toddlers aren't really ones for sitting on the patio, talking, FYI.)

Also if you are looking for Fourth of July activities for elementary students these activities are great, the Fourth of July presents a delightful canvas of red, white, and blue to splash their creativity. These simple July 4th activities not only keep the young ones entertained but also foster an understanding of the holiday's significance.

From silly patriotic games (that happen to make gorgeous backdrops) and red, white, and blue sensory ideas to super-simple ways to give back, here are 15 fail-proof Fourth of July activities for kids. Time to get crackin'!

1. Make a batch of red, white, and blue rice

One of the best Fourth of July activities for younger kids is a patriotic sensory bin — not only is it a fun showpiece to any backyard barbecue, but it's also super easy (and affordable) to whip up. (Here's a quick how-to from Little Bins, Little Hands.)

2. Make (or buy) capes

How adorable is this patriotic superhero cape from Everfan? Whether you've got little ones swooshing around the backyard in these numbers or are rocking one yourself as you grill, these are sure to make any Fourth of July barbecue a little more festive.

Where to buy: Patriotic Superhero Cape ($86, Everfan)

3. Play balloon darts

A fun way to spice up a Fourth of July backyard barbecue? A game of red, white, and blue balloon darts. Not only will kids and adults alike love trying their hand at popping a patriotic balloon, but! If you take a page out of Hostess With the Mostess' book, you can also turn this age-old game into an aesthetically pleasing backdrop for your Instagram photos. Win-win.

4. Decorate bikes

Hands down, one of the most iconic Fourth of July activities for kids! Whether your family is partaking in a bike parade of sorts or you just want to take a leisurely ride around the neighborhood, patriotically decorated bicycles and tricycles (and strollers!) are always a good idea — and the decorating part is a fun Fourth of July activity for the whole family.

5. Write a letter to somebody who's serving

Writing a thank-you note — or even a letter, saying hi!— to someone in the military is a great way to celebrate the Fourth of July and honor the men and women who are serving our country. Megan from Coffee Cups and Crayons did this with her daughter's Girl Scout Troop and then packed up the letters and sent them to A Million Thanks, which then gets the cards to men and women who are serving overseas.
